Arkansas Men To Address Meeting On Public Power

Gentry, Hope, and Christy, Jonesboro, Selected To Speak

AT MUSCLE SHOALS

Alabama Cities Staging National Conference There

Two Arkansas men representing the most successful municipal utilities in this state will speak on the program of the Public Ownership Conference which opens at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, Wednesday.

They are: J. F. Christy, of Jonesboro, manager of the Jonesboro Municipal Light and Water Plant; and State Senator U. A. Gentry, of Hope, attorney for the Hope Water & Light Plant and representative of the Arkansas Public Ownership League.

Mr. Gentry will leave for Muscle Shoals Tuesday, and speaks before the conference Thursday morning on "Municipal Ownership in Hope and Arkansas." Mr. Christy is scheduled to speak Saturday afternoon, his subject being "The Public Ownership Movement in Arkansas."

The conference, which calls together representatives of municipal utilities from all over the United States, is expected to hasten the final disposition of the government-owned hydro-electric plant at Muscle Shoals.

On the official program published by the Public Ownership Conference it is charged:

"The plant is not being used to its full capacity and great quantities of potential power are going to waste while the cities, towns and villages right around the plant and others farther away are begging and pleading for power."

The conference is being held under the auspices of the Muscle Shoals cities: Florence, Tuscumbia, Muscle Shoals and Sheffield, all in Alabama.

Local Man On A. E. Board of Trustees

Head of Hope Schools Named for Fourth Time As Official.

D. L. Paistey, superintendent of Hope schools, was last week named for the fourth successive time as a member of the board of trustees of the Arkansas Education Association, and enters now upon his 13th year of service in the Association.

There are four members of this board, one elected each year for a four year term, and Mr. Paistey, as a member, has served as secretary of the organization for twelve years.

The Hope man is one among the veteran educators of the state who takes an active part in school matters and he, with others like him, is responsible in large part for the forward strides of Arkansas in the past few years in matters educational.

Dr. Carrigan Goes To National Hunt

One of Nation's Fox Chasers Attending Annual Meet

Dr. Pink Carrigan left Sunday afternoon for Nashville, Tenn., where he will attend an annual gathering of fox hunters.

This is by way of being Dr. Carrigan's annual vacation, fox hunting being all its woods and phases being his particular hobby. He is known to chase-loving sportsmen over the south and is one among the prominent leaders in the association.

The Scot Learns How "Speedy" Got That Way

Jimmy MacGomery, who claims to be Scotch, has learned a few things the past week-end, among them being how "Speedy" Hutton got his name.

Jimmy, who has been in school at Conway, came home to Murfreesboro for the week-end, hoping to pick up a lot of diamonds in the rough. He decided to come to Hope Saturday afternoon and was in Nashville waiting for a train when "Speedy" Hutton appeared upon the scene, piloting a 1929 model Ford master. He invited Jimmy to ride, Jimmy did. But not any more.

"Honest," Jimmy complained when he reached Hope and his hair had begun to settle back to its normal position. "I never had such a time in my life. He slows down to 55 to cross a railroad track and to 60 once when he passed a car. The roof of my mouth is sore where my head hit it and we flitted with Old Man Deeds 112 times in that 28 miles. Next time I'm in a hurry and "Speedy" shows up—well, I'll walk."

But "Speedy" only grinned that good-natured, contagious grin of his and went out and tightened up a few nuts on the fender and got ready to give another bird the air.

Army of Ailing at Miracle Shrine

Thousands thronged Holy Cross Cemetery at Malden, Mass., as reports of modern-day miracles brought pilgrims from all parts of the country to the grave of the Rev. Patrick J. Powers in quest of cures. Above you see part of the crowd gathered about the 60-year-old tomb of the young priest while invalids came in wheel-chairs, on crutches and on stretchers to be healed. Little Eugene Reynolds, lower left, had worn braces for two years but he's pictured, lower left, walking without their aid after a visit to the shrine. "Look, mother, see the things!" cried 13-year-old Catherine Cronin, shown lower right, with her parents, at the grave—and those were the first coherent words she was said to have uttered in several years.

Charley Crosnoe Accidentally Shot

Suffers Wound In Hand and Leg When Pistol Falls From Pocket

Charles Crosnoe, well known young man about town, is suffering from bullet wounds received Saturday afternoon when he went to lift a coat off a coat hanger in the clothes closet at his home and dropped a .32 automatic pistol to the floor, the weapon exploding when it struck.

Young Crosnoe grabbed at the pistol when it fell but failed to catch it. The bullet pierced his left hand, lodging in his leg and being removed a short time later by surgeons.

The wounds, while painful, are not regarded as necessarily serious and it is thought the victim will be able to be out again in a few days.

Land Forfeiture Act Under Attack

Emison Seeks To Have Measure Declared Unconstitutional.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 18.—An attack on Act No. 129 of 1929, which changes the procedure for sales by the state of lands forfeited for taxes, was launched last week in Pulaski County by a suit filed in the Circuit Court by W. L. Tedford, a suit against W. L. Tedford, who holds a tax deed to the Emison at 1500 Maple street, which is lot 1, block 25, North Argenta addition.

This litigation will be observed with interest by building and loan organizations and title men, who are opposed to the law, it was said. Several other suits contesting sales made by the state have been filed in various chancery and Circuit courts.

The complaint charges that the new act is discriminatory and, therefore, should be declared invalid. It was pointed out that if the owner of the lot, had undertaken to redeem the property, he would have been required to pay all the delinquent taxes, plus the penalties, but Act No. 129 permitted Mr. Tedford and W. W. Shepherd to buy it from the state for one year's taxes. Thus, it was contended, the law discriminates against the owners of property.

The petition also asserts that, even if the act is valid the sale by the state was void because it was not in compliance with legal requirements. Mr. Emison says he was not notified by the purchasers and was not served with notice of the tax sale by the sheriff's office.

Objection also is made to the act on the ground that it does not allow any time after the sale for redemption. It was said by J. H. Carmichael one of the plaintiff's attorneys, that the new law does not bar defense which had been upheld before its passage.

County Unit for Schools

A series of articles interpreting the County Unit system of public schools, which Hempstead county will be asked to adopt at a special election December 10.

What Are Some of the Objections to the County Unit?

Some people have the idea that a county unit system means one school to each county. This is wrong. A well-planned county system is very much like a city system—a number of elementary schools accessible to the younger children, a few junior high schools in connection with some of the larger, more centrally located elementary schools, and still fewer senior high schools serving the children of neighboring elementary schools and junior high schools. With district boundary lines forever in the way, it is impossible to locate schools in a rational and economical way. Especially is it hard to avoid small and expensive high schools under the district plan.

Some object to the control of the schools becoming centralized. A county board of education has absolutely no more power over the district than the old district board had. It is merely a question of increased territory and not increased control. It used to be that there was a board for each ward of the city. Some years ago, however, the cities concluded that one board could take care of the whole system, so that they did away with the ward boards. Under the plan of one board for each school system rather than one board for each school the cities have prospered. They would not dream of going back to the old plan. The county school system will be a group of schools conveniently located to accommodate the children within its bounds. It is true that there will be one board to administer the system, but this board will be more of a relief than a burden to local districts.

People who have had no experience with the county school unit may wonder whether a single board, meeting probably once a month, can properly administer school systems that include many schools scattered over a considerable area and affected by many different local conditions. I, the county board possesses an efficient administrative organization it can perform the task more efficiently than it can be performed in any other way yet devised. But a county board with a proper organization does its work in a manner different from that usually employed by a district board. The members of district boards generally attempt to administer the school under their jurisdiction. They actually build and equip school houses, elect and purchase school supplies and equipment, employ teachers, janitors, bus drivers, and organize the schools. In short, they personally run the schools. In contrast, small boards of education administering large systems, whether city or county, select agents on the basis of training and fitness for just such work and act through them.

Some say that the county unit means that the control of the schools will be taken away from the people. This is a myth. All the control that the people have now is to elect the directors, and they would have the same power exactly with the board. They would vote for the members of the county board just as they have always done for a local board and would transact all school business through it.

Under the district plan the people have a voice in electing local directors for their own school, but they can't say a word about what is done in the neighboring district where they probably have to send half of their children. Under the county plan the people of one community share the control of their school with their neighbors, but at the same time they take part in the control of all county schools. In this way all the children in the county have a chance for a complete public school education, and all the people in the county have a voice in the control of all the schools.

To those accustomed to the smaller local unit for schools, the county may seem too large to serve as the local school unit. Twenty-five years ago distance and physical conditions prevented such use of the county, but improved highways, railroads, automobiles, telephones, and the rural mail have brought all parts of the county as closely together physically, intellectually, and socially as the different sections of a city. It is, in many matters, as easy to administer a system of a hundred schools as a system of six schools. It is no more difficult in the one case than in the other to fix upon and contract for appropriate and adequate school supplies, such as coal, floor oil, chalk, supplementary materials, or to work out fair salary schedules for the payment of principal, teachers, janitors, bus drivers, etc. When these and a score of other matters are properly worked out for a school, they are worked out for a hundred schools where conditions are similar.

People who have had no experience with the county school unit may wonder whether a single board, meeting probably once a month, can properly administer school systems that include many schools scattered over a considerable area and affected by many different local conditions. I, the county board possesses an efficient administrative organization it can perform the task more efficiently than it can be performed in any other way yet devised. Physicians Expect Death of Secretary Good Any Moment

Official Unconscious for Hours and End Is Near

FAMILY AT BEDSIDE

White House in Constant Touch With Hospital for Reports

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP) Physicians abandoned hope today for the recovery of James W. Good, Secretary of War, but the unusual vitality of the cabinet official has delayed the end which has been expected at any moment for many hours.

Mr. Good's condition was known to be grave even before the completion of the operation at Walter Reed hospital for removal of his appendix. The appendix was found in a gangrenous condition and was situated unusually low in the pelvic structure.

Mrs. Good kept her vigil at the hospital today and their two sons, Jas. W. Jr., and Robert Edmund were also there but the secretary was unable to recognize any of them. He has been unconscious for several hours.

The White House kept in touch with the hospital, receiving reports as to Mr. Good's condition, as has been done since the operation was performed.

Another Film Fire Wrecks Hospital

Building Badly Damaged But Patients All Moved To Safety

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18.—(AP) Fire starting from an explosion in an X-ray room swept the University of California hospital this morning. More than 100 patients were removed from the building but none of them suffered any serious injury.

Hospital attendants said the fire evidently started from an explosion of X-ray films in the X-ray room on the third floor of the building. The structure was badly damaged.

Miss Juanita Costenborber, telephone operator, was injured when she jumped from the third floor of the burning building. She had remained at her post until driven out by fire and fumes and all avenues of escape blocked.

The blaze was put under control only after the fourth alarm had been sounded and a large portion of the city's fire fighting equipment had responded.

Stock Market In Another Rampage

Stream of Selling Orders Send Issues To New Low Levels

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP) A steady stream of selling orders poured into the New York Stock Exchange today and forced prices to a generally lower level, the decline ranging from one to fifteen dollars per share.

The announcement of the failure of a New York brokerage house, having membership in the Exchange, made five minutes before closing time failed to bring out any unusual flurry, though a few high priced specialties broke sharply under the onslaught of floor traders.

Says Collection Laws Antiquated

El Dorado Attorney Says "Made for Debtors and Crooks"

EL DORADO, Nov. 18.—(AP) Silas W. Rogers, El Dorado attorney, declared the collection laws of Arkansas "though made for creditors, work to the advantage of debtors and crooks" in a general attack on collection laws of the state in an address featuring the opening session of the first annual conference of retail merchants in connection with the Arkansas Association of Credit Men here today.

Rogers urged the association to take steps to have the laws applying to their business, which he said were antiquated, revised or if possible abolished. Politicians and even judges of courts did in so construing the present collection statutes that they have in many instances been nullified.

Take Depositions In Tunney's Case

Mayor and Municipal Judge of Hot Springs Are Called

HOT SPRINGS, Nov. 18.—(AP) Depositions to be used in the $500,000 suit filed in Connecticut by John S. Fogarty, former plumbing contractor of Fort Worth, Texas, against J. J. (Gene) Tunney, retired heavyweight champion for alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Fogarty were taken here today in offices of attorneys representing Fogarty. Six or eight depositions were taken, it was announced. Newspaper men were excluded from the hearing.

Chas. F. Martin, of New Haven, Conn., directed the taking of the depositions for Fogarty. Tunney was represented by Frank Pace, Little Rock attorney, and Houston Emory, of Hot Springs.

Fogarty's attorneys were seeking evidence to support the allegations that Tunney and Mrs. Fogarty were here together in 1923, 1924 and 1925.

Mayor McLaughlin and Municipal Judge Ledgerwood were among the witnesses whose depositions were taken.

Alleged Killer of Rothstein To Trial

McManus Faces Jury for the Killing of Broadway Gambler

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP) Just a year and 14 days after Arnold Rothstein, Broadway gambler, was shot and killed the state of New York today began the trial of the man accused of his murder, George A. McManus, race track gambler and bookmaker.

Early this morning court officials began calling the names of the 150 "blue ribbon" talesmen from whom the jury to try the case will be selected.

All spectators were barred from the room, only talesmen and 30 newspaper reporters being allowed behind the police lines.

The case was first called for trial last Tuesday but was postponed because of the illness of Alvin Thomas who was ill in a Milwaukee hospital of pleurisy. Thomas, whom the state characterized as "its most important witness, has since recovered and will be present at the trial.

Motorists Are Warned Against Monoxide Gas

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP) With the coming of cold weather, when doors and windows are likely to be closed, the American Automobile association warns motorists against carbon monoxide gas.

The most simple way to avoid its effects is not to remain in a closed garage with the car running. A window or the door should be opened. Enough of the poisonous gas is expelled from the exhaust of the automobile to cause death within a few minutes in a small closed garage, the association says.

Deaths from the gas, it was said, have nearly doubled since 1923 when a census bureau figures show 2,376 persons died from it.

Treatment of persons overcome by the gas is recommended as follows: "The victim should be removed to fresh air as soon as possible.

"If breathing has stopped or is weak and intermittent, artificial respiration should be given persistently until breathing has been resumed or the heart stopped.

"Pure oxygen or a mixture of 5 per cent carbon dioxide in oxygen should be administered."

INCOME TAX LAW OK

Says Measure Is Not Property Tax Prohibited By Constitution

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The validity of Act No. 180, of the 1929 legislature, authorizing the issuance of $3,250,000 in bonds for the new state hospital for Nervous Diseases and improvements at the Arkansas Tuberculosis Sanitarium, was upheld by the Supreme Court today.

The ruling affirmed the decree of the Pulaski county Chancery court dismissing the complaint of H. P. Baker against the State Hospital Construction Commission seeking to restrain the Commission from issuing the bonds.

Baker based his suit on the contention that the last legislature, in passing the income tax law, violated the section of the constitution which prevents the legislature from levying a tax exceeding one per cent of the assessed valuation of the state during any one year.

The Supreme Court declared the income tax, as well as the inheritance and cigarette taxes, were separate from the property tax to which it said the constitutional provision applied.

The opinion cleared away any obstacle in the sale of the first $350,000 of bonds on which bids will be received by the Hospital Commission today.

Howell Seeks Rehearing. Attorneys for W. H. (Bill) Howell, suing for "electroconvulsion" for a triple slaying in Crawford county, were given two weeks by the Court in which to file briefs for a re-hearing of the case which was affirmed against Howell by the court two weeks ago.

Little Rock Post Office Fire Swept

Fire Department Rescues Employees Trapped In Building

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 18.—(AP) Several employees were rescued from the fourth floor of the postoffice and federal building by firemen and other workers in the building were routed by a fire in the basement which filled the entire building with smoke early today.

Postmaster Jas. Ginochio said that the damage was small and that no mail or supplies of value were damaged.

Burning paint supplies in the basement resulted in a great volume of smoke which trapped a number of workers on the fourth floor and which necessitated their rescue by firemen. The cause of the blaze, which started in the janitor's supply room, has not been determined.

Smoke pouring from all the windows in the building attracted a large crowd to the scene and all work in the building was suspended for more than an hour.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 8.—(AP) Governor Farnell today appointed F. W. Niemeyer, of Little Rock, and Carl Hollis, of Warren, to the State Hospital Construction Commission to succeed D. W. Puryear, of Jonesboro, and T. H. Barton, El Dorado, resigned.

The governor also announced the appointment of George B. Pugh, Little Rock attorney, as successor to the late M. W. Hordy, as a member of the State Board of Education.

Col. Barton and Mr. Puryear resigned because they said their business affairs would prevent them attending meetings of the commission. Mr. Niemeyer is president of the Barker Trust Co. and Mr. Hollis also is a banker.

The Day of Organization

HOPE Chamber of Commerce holds its annual banquet meeting at the Barlow hotel this Tuesday night. Every business man and woman, every property-holder in Hope, should buy a ticket and attend that meeting. Here is why:

Vernon L. Thompson, vice-president of the Home Insurance company, will be one of the speakers. We heard Mr. Thompson, speaking to Hope Rotary club last spring, deliver one of the ablest addresses on the history of Southern business we have ever listened to. Mr. Thompson is informed. The curse of every city is its mis-informed citizens. The blessing of every city is its energetic citizens. Those who attend Tuesday's dinner will at least be energetic, and we guarantee that they can't hear Vernon Thompson without being thrilled and inspired.

After all, we are living in the South—the New South. No other section of America is subject to such tremendous change, is offered such splendid opportunities. The South is today where the West was yesterday, on the enchanted frontier of progress and development. It all depends on the men and women who live here, whether they catch fire with the spirit of the times, or live aloof and sullen, to watch more enterprising, less gifted, sections march by them.

Among the speakers will also be W. E. Lamb, superintendent of the Missouri Pacific, and C. G. Lundy, superintendent of the Louisiana & Arkansas. Hope owes much to its railroad men. With three companies and four routes, two of which are main lines, Hope is a strategic point in the network of Southwestern rails. The railroad is still one of the mightiest commercial factors in America. Hope will want to know what her railroad men think about the city and territory.

And beyond all this lies the simple fact that the Chamber of Commerce is the vital organ of American business. Every city has one. No city gets anywhere today without the prayers and concerted action of her citizens.

The efficacy of prayer is not to be doubted, and when it comes to community projects we are one of those who believe in praying in public places.

People do not naturally come together and organize. Of all things business is probably the hardest to draw into a single group. It involves money, private enterprise, and personalities. That is why you hear objections to the Chamber of Commerce wherever you go—and why there is a Chamber of Commerce everywhere.

Hope needs 100 per cent support at the Chamber meeting Tuesday night. Alibis don't go. A vote not for Hope is a vote against her. The Chamber of Commerce should be tax-supported, but since it isn't it ought to prepare a directory of the business and property interests of the city and publish it in deadly parallel with the list of paid members.

Every business house and landowner who lives and thrives within the corporate limits takes advantage of the publicity of the name of Hope. It is worth something to have that name made bigger and better.

"Russia" and "China"

NEWSPAPER headlines, even when they follow the facts as accurately as the copy-readers can make them, sometimes give a false impression.

This has been the case in the recent stories telling about the Russo-Chinese difficulties.

The headlines have told us that "Russia" did this and that "China" did that; that "Russia" was prepared to take strong measures, that "China" was going to insist on something or other, that "Russia" was adopting a firm tone—and so on, day after day, with dozens of variations.

On the surface, all of these headlines were correct enough. But it is precisely this kind of talking and thinking that makes us look upon war as a more or less necessary evil.

What, for instance, do we mean when we say that "Russia" was deeply offended by China's seizure of a thousand miles of railway tracks? Do we mean the Russian foreign office? If so, we ought to say so. For "Russia" is a nation of some 140,000,000 men, women and children; and at least 90 per cent of these people would not care if the Chinese Eastern Railway went up in smoke overnight.

Similarly, "China," likewise, ought to mean, not a foreign secretary and his advisors, but a tremendous land filled with 400,000,000 peasants. The vast majority of these 400,000,000 do not even know that a country named Russia exists. They neither know nor care about the difficulties in Manchuria.

Our loose usage of words gives us a false impression—the impression that the common people of both countries are really concerned in what is happening. They aren't. All they want is peace—the chance to live out their lives in their own homes, undisturbed and secure.

The tragedy, of course, lies in the fact that it is precisely these unconcerned and ignorant Chinese and Russian peasants who would have to go out and get killed if the two nations should go to war.

Another "Grid" Season On in Full Swing!

LET'S DOWN EM, BOYS!

ALL RIGHT! TACKLE EM FOR A FIRST DOWN! THERE ARE LOTS MORE TO GO!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Senator Robinson of Arkansas piles the blame for the stock market crash on President Hoover and Secretary Mellon, and Senator Robinson of Indiana traces it to John J. Raskob.

You take your choice in case you don't know any better. Otherwise, you just laugh at the spectacle of the Senators Robinson indulging in the ancient practice of blaming the other party for all the country's business and financial troubles. You wonder how the politicians in either party can continue to get away with blaming each other for panics and slumps, if your memory is good on historical facts.

The panic of 1857 occurred in the James Buchanan administration when the Democrats had both the White House and Congress. Of course, it was quite a help to the Republicans in the Lincoln campaign of 1860.

Bad Times Under Grant
But the depression of 1872-77, which occurred in the Republican Grant administration, was considerably worse because the national business fabric had grown a great deal since the Civil War. The worst year was 1873. That bad period was fine business for the Democrats in the Tilden campaign of 1876.

The Democrats were in power with Cleveland when the big panic of 1893 came on, depressing the country for three years and giving the Republicans a grand talking point to aid in achieving their victory of 1896.

A smaller edition occurred in the famous panic of 1907. And the next period of hard times, accompanied by a serious unemployment problem, developed in the early days of the first Wilson administration. Republicans pointed at conditions and said: "We told you so!" A common opinion is that more serious distress was averted only by the outbreak of the European War, which made us the world's workshop.

Everyone remembers the 1921-22 deflation and hard times under Harding, the newly elected Republican. And now hundreds of thousands of persons have lost their shirts in the stock market following the Hoover inauguration.

The truth seems to be that such unhappy visitations as these come regardless of party victories, as comes the boll weevil or the blizzard. And if the Republicans want to preserve the yarn that Democrats breed panics they will have to let a Democratic administration be elected in advance of the next bad slump. Otherwise people will be noticing that all bad things happen in Republican administrations and forgetting that there aren't any other administrations for things to happen in. People are like that.

If Senator Nye gets his proposed investigation of stock speculation started the committee probably won't find out who, if anyone, plotted the recent market crash and it won't pin the blame on Hoover or Mellon or Raskob. But it might decide for itself what might have been done beforehand to head the thing off. The finger of commission are Wall Street's but the sins of omission are Washington's.

Less than two years ago young Mr. LaFollette of Wisconsin put in a resolution calling on the Federal Reserve Board to reduce speculative loans. The board opposed it, but after hearings the Senate Banking and Currency Committee reported favorably on the resolution. However, the resolution could only come up under unanimous consent and the Senate never voted on it.

"ON WITH THE SHOW" IS REAL TALKIE PICTURE
Manager Jack Eaves of the Saenger Theatre announces Tuesday night as the opening date for "On With the Show," Warner Bros. first 100 per cent natural color, talking, singing, dancing Vitaphone picture.

"On With the Show," beside the glamour of back stage life—it is a play within a play—combines a tender heart story, with the fantasy that is in the extravaganza which the stranded company of players are determined to put on, despite the fact that the "ghost" refuses to walk.

Georgious costumes and settings; are seen in their own brilliant coloring, and the timings make the players all but living. Beside the great cast, "On With the Show" has a chorus of dazzling beauties, numbering over one hundred.

One of the interesting things about this story is the fact that it is the first play of Humphrey Pearson, who went to Hollywood for his health, casually flung his brainchild into the Warner Bros. lot—to find himself a fortnight later—with a job as a special writer for them, and with "On With the Show" in production.

Local B. P. O. Elks Outline Program

Local lodge Elks have started their usual fall and winter activities and are planning for an extremely interesting winter-time period. The dance last week, where music was furnished by the Hollywood Troubadours, was one of the most enjoyable of the year, with a crowd taxing the capacity of the spacious hall in attendance. As usual, the Elks will see to it that Thanksgiving Day is a reality to the poorer families of this community. Jack Hyde is chairman of the committee having this pleasant duty in charge and any one knowing of a family in destitute circumstances is asked to get in touch with him at Star office. The next dance will be a Thanksgiving hop—a German dance—beginning at 12:01 Thanksgiving morning and lasting until daylight. Music by Jimmy Pryor's orchestra—and that's a guarantee it will be good. The first Sunday in December is Elks Memorial Day and appropriate ceremonies are being planned by the order here. The service will be in memory of absent brothers and the public is invited to attend. Full announcement of the program will be made later.

The Antlers, junior organization of the order, have in Hope one of the liveliest organizations in the state and plan a membership drive during the winter months which will add many of the younger good fellows in the city to their list of members.

liming cantaloupes on the Fruit and Truck Experiment Station near Hope last year showed that one ton of ground limestone per acre produced more than twice as many cantaloupes as a similar sized unlimed area. Applications of two, three, and even four tons of lime per acre showed little increase over the one ton treatment. Although lime leaches to some extent, it has a beneficial effect for several years, in most instances. Fortunately for the farmer, lime can be applied at any convenient time during the year; but as a rule, it is best to make the application to some responsive crop in advance to planting. It is best to follow lime immediately with some legume crop, and later plant the regular field crop. One can safely scatter lime on the soil anytime during the fall, winter and spring provided it is well mixed in the soil. A common practice is to apply lime on the surface of the soil, then break or dish it in thoroughly. One of the chief problems of using lime is getting it on the land. Several types of spreaders or distributors are on the market; however, few farmers are in position to use such. One practical method of distributing is to throw small piles at regular intervals in the field and later scatter by hand with a shovel. Twenty pound piles placed twenty feet apart each way will give approximately one ton per acre. Several forms of lime suitable for agricultural purposes are on the market. Like fertilizers, the cheapest grade is not always the best. The cost of freight, hauling, and distributing is the same for all grades; so generally speaking the best grade of ground limestone is the cheapest, though the original cost may be higher. Ground limestone is more generally and possibly more satisfactorily used for agricultural purposes than any other form. The quality of this material depends on its purity (freedom from dirt and other foreign matter), and fineness (the finer the particles, the more effective). It is possible to secure lime in this section in car lots at a delivered price of about $3.00 per ton. Figuring that the hauling and spreading a ton of lime on an acre amounts to $2.00, I know of no $6.00 investment which will assure the average farmer greater return.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Mrs. Emma Hogarth, said to keep a hoard of money in her room on the second floor of Mrs. Rhodes' boarding house, is strangled to death. Bonnie Dundee, "cub" detective, assisting Lieut. Strawn, attaches significance to the utterance "Pad Penny!" made by Capt'n. Mrs. Hogarth's parrot.

Suspicion falls on Emil Sevier, former boarder whom Mrs. Hogarth has accused of trying to rob her and who leaves town hurriedly. Strawn quizzes Henry Dowd, new boarder, out of work, who insists he was asleep. Cora Barker, theater pianist, tells of borates Norma's admission she came to his room to tell him of the interview and also confesses his anger with Mrs. Hogarth.

Magnus says he typed until 12:15. Daisy Shepherd, absent at the time of the murder, says she was in the kitchen robbing the ice box. The next morning Dundee makes a speech asking the boarders to remain. All agree but Daisy.

Dundee learns from Mrs. Rhodes of the mysterious manner in which Mrs. Hogarth received and sent mail, making the postman her only confidant. When Dundee discovers a piece of skin in the parrot's cage, he recalls in this room last night after you returned from the theater. I know that you tore a page from Mrs. Hogarth's diary—the entry for May 19. I know further that that diary entry told the true story of why you were disinherited by Mrs. Hogarth. I knew that before you burned your hand, it had been severely bitten by this parrot here, that—

"Oh, stop!" Cora moaned. "I'll tell! I was crazy to think I could keep you from knowing!"

"Knowing that you helped Emil Sevier rob Mrs. Hogarth after he had killed her?" Strawn interrupted grimly.

wait at the theater until 12 o'clock for Bert—Mr. Magnus. When I got home about 10 minutes after 12 I saw no one on the grounds or on the porch—either the upstairs porch or the down stairs porch. Not that I looked closely. I wasn't expecting to see anyone—

"Not Emil Sevier, with whom you'd been whispering earlier in the evening at the theater?" Strawn reminded her innocently.

"No! I didn't think he'd have the nerve to do it—rob her, I mean—after I'd told him for the third time that I'd see him in hell before I'd help him do it."

"You admit, then, that Sevier did try to get your help in robbing Mrs. Hogarth?"

"Oh, I'm not trying to lie to you now," Cora assured him with tragic hopelessness. "But please let me tell it in my own way—just as it happened. Emil said he was going to make another try at it tonight, before he left for Chicago. He was dead broke and deeply in debt. The first time he talked to me about the job, as he called it, was on the night of May 18, or rather it was after midnight, that Saturday night. About 1 o'clock, I think it was, when he sneaked into my room from his, by way of the porch and the windows. I hadn't dreamed he was that kind of man, and at first I thought he was joking. He'd been—making love to me and we—had talked some about getting married, but we weren't actually engaged. I—I never was really in love with him, but when a girl gets to be—nearly 30—Oh, I won't lie about that either. I'm—39 years old, but I'll—I'll—I don't know what I'll do if you tell the reporters—"

"The secret of your age is safe with me," Strawn assured her, the slight emphasis on the last word indicating that her secret would undoubtedly come out before the grand jury.

"Well, I managed to make him leave my room at last. It was nearly 12 o'clock," Cora went on, with the quietness of despair. "We thought Mrs. Hogarth would surely be asleep and not hear or see him when he crawled past her window but—she did see him—was standing in the dark of her window. She said something sarcastic to Emil. She thought, of course, that Emil and I were—lovers—but—we weren't! Please believe that."

"All right," Strawn grinned in a way that made Dundee clench his fist. He wanted to shout to his chief, "For God's sake, ease up on her! She's telling you the truth now be decent to her!"

"The next day—Sunday, May 19—Mrs. Hogarth sent for me and taunted me with having a lover. She'd always disliked Emil anyway. She told me she was going to cut me out of her will, and I told her to do so, and welcome. I couldn't explain what Emil was really in my room for. Well, I knew it would all go in her diary. Everything that happened here, that interested her, got into the diary I myself gave her. She changed her will and named Walter Elyles as her new heir, and Emil stopped

Army's Business Affairs Practically on Cash Basis

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Business operations of the Army are practically on a cash basis which has resulted in a saving of $359,899.31 in commercial discounts during the past fiscal year, Maj. Gen. R. Carmichael, Chief of Finance, reported to Secretary of War Good today.

The saving represents 99.93 per cent of the maximum collectible under contracts. This was achieved, Carmichael revealed, despite a shortage in man-power so acute it has been found impossible to give Finance Officers "the proper course of training in technical finance duties."

Carmichael recommended the number of Finance Officers be increased by 45 men above the present number 120.

pretending to be in love with me. I hated him then.

Strawn nodded understandingly. "And when was the second time he asked you to help him rob Mrs. Hogarth?"

"I can't remember exactly. It must have been around the first of June," Cora went on dully. "I refused again and threatened to tell Mrs. Rhodes if he didn't give up the idea."

"Why didn't you?" Strawn snapped. "Isn't that obvious?" Cora asked, with a shrug of her thin shoulders. "He would have told Mrs. Rhodes enough to discredit me. He would have told her that Mrs. Hogarth herself had seen him coming out of my room at 2 o'clock in the morning, and that I was just sore at him for not wanting to marry me."

"I see. Go on."

"Well, it was about two weeks ago that Mrs. Hogarth woke up suddenly in the night—toward morning—and saw a man in her room. He had a flashlight turned on and it made just enough light for her to see that it was Emil. She turned over in bed to reach the light switch near the head of the bed, and when the light went on Emil was gone. She didn't know how he got out, because he didn't leave by either the door or the window—"

"But you know how he managed it, don't you?" Strawn pounced. "Yes, Cora admitted unhesitatingly. "It was part of his plan. 'I'll way that made Dundee clench his fist. He wanted to shout to his chief, 'For God's sake, ease up on her! She's telling you the truth now be decent to her!'"

Strawn followed, watching curiously as the woman entered the closet, on nat, idpointedmlhid—inmfvyakt knelt, and pointed to a wide board which formed part of the back wall of the closet.

"The nails have been pulled out of that board from the other side, Mrs. Hogarth's closet has the same back as Emil's—or rather, Mr. Dowd's. But Emil had that room then, and fixed this board so he could push it inward into Mrs. Hogarth's closet and crawl through. All he had to do to be in Mrs. Hogarth's room then was with the death of young Kraft in what the prosecution contends was a fight over the girl. She was determined to defend him, then, she said, to marry him.

"That might well be the picture of a woman of the world, but in her eyes out of court she has presented herself in quite another light. She has been viewed romping in glee at 'top' with youngsters in the jollyland and chasing baby chicks in the disgust of a ruffled hen.

"What is your name?" bellowed the district attorney, in court.

"Ione Marie Gloria Gay Powell Rouzer Oni," she replied sweetly.

She explained her maiden name was Marie Gloria Rouzer; that she became Gay Powell on her marriage to a British actor in France, and used Ione Orde on sketches she made.

Twenty-one years old now, Ione was reared in France.

She left New York early in October with Jack Kraft, a gross room clerk, employ with other ambitions and a hector. Aboard the steamship Crocody they found their total capital was less than $25.

They planned to marry a while in New Orleans, then hitch-hike to the Pacific coast, sketching and writing. It was an idea they had.

Aboard the ship the girl met John McCouldrick, snave second officer.

The night of October 1, a drama, full details of which have not been established, was enacted on the boat. The climax came when the lookout called:

"Man overboard."

Rescue failed.

When the Crocody reached New Orleans the log told of Jack Kraft committing suicide. The story was accepted by authorities. A few days later Kraft's body was washed ashore. A bullet hole through his heart was found.

The girl was arrested with Sammy Spstein, second steward. Spstein entered the jail here as its first occupant since last spring.

Both he and the girl maintained Kraft had jumped overboard.

Then, the day the Crocody started on the return voyage, the girl scribbled a note to McCouldrick, expressing her love for him.

McCouldrick was arrested when the boat reached New York and taken to the Pointe a la Hache jail. He said he had no intention of marrying the girl.

For weeks Ione's identity was sought. She insisted her true name was Ione Orde. Then someone found an athletic medal among her effects with "Gloria" scratched on it.

Finally her mother, Mrs. Gloria M. Rouzer, recognized her daughter from newspaper photographs.

Mrs. Rouzer hurried to Louisiana with Miss Dorothy Fooks, a lawyer. Even after Mrs. Rouzer arrived, the girl denied she was her mother. Finally, though, she rushed to her mother's arms, weeping.

She explained she wished to protect the family name.

"This is the first time my daughter has deceived me," she said. "I cannot understand her."

And neither can others.

Ione Orde, held in connection with the death of Jack Kraft, has mystified all who have interviewed her at the jail in Pointe a la Hache, La. Also held in the case is John McCouldrick (lower left), ship's officer.

POINTE A LA HACHE, La. Nov. 16. —(AP)—A mystery novel in herself—that's Ione Orde.

Of women who lately have risen from obscurity to pique the public curiosity, none has kept herself with in a shroud of secrecy with more success than this ultra-modern product, central figure in the investigation of Jack Kraft's death.

This black-haired, green-eyed girl has baffled experts on feminine psychology, shrew detectives and ever her own mother.

She landed here October 11, a riddle woman. A month later she still was that, as the curtain slowly lifted on her past, the enigma deepened.

She has clung to spoken lines with the skill of a trained actress. She withstood, immovable, the rigors of a third degree, the pleadings of a priest of her church and of his distraught mother, and not once did she falter in those lines. Her prosecutors, who tried to break down her story, she drove to exasperation by boldly enacting her role on the witness stand with a threat of perjury dangling before her.

From the witness stand he openly smiled at John McCouldrick, ship's officer, man-about-town type, indicted on a murder charge in connection

THE BYRD EXPEDITION chose Chesterfield

Few tests are fool-proof—but the Byrd Antarctic Expedition used one when it chose cigarettes for its two years in the ice.

Members of the expedition—all men of judgment and experience—were simply asked, "What cigarette do you like best?" And a large majority answered Chesterfield.

Picked men, picked cigarettes... cigarettes chosen for the only reason that ever appeals to experienced smokers: dependable good taste—

His Nibs Price Can Grin Now
The experts have been taking it on the chin regularly during this football season, but that victory of California over Southern California knocked most of them flatter than Joe Beckett, the well-known prone British heavyweight.

When Nibs Price brought his Golden Bears east to play Pennsylvania, the eastern division of experts were quite rude with his Nibs and his boys. To be sure the Bears beat Pennsylvania, but by only one touchdown. The team that could beat Penn by only one touchdown, the point was advanced, must expect to lose decisively to Southern California and Stanford.

Interpreting Not So Hot
Observers generally have held the Jones claim in higher esteem than California. Even last year after Georgia Tech had beaten California, the cry was heard in some parts on the Pacific slope that Tech had not met the best team in California by a long way.

To be sure California had tied U. S. C. in 1928, but that didn't seem to mean anything. The interpreting after the game, it appears, is half the fun. The interpreting doesn't seem to be quite so good.

At any rate Nibs Price must be having a quiet little laugh at the expense of those who wrote that his team wasn't going anywhere in particular this season. The Stanford-California game remains in the way of Mr. Price's complete relaxation. After Stanford has won that one, which it probably will, you will have the spectacle of three beaten coast teams. Perhaps the San Francisco Seals can be given football outfits and sent against Notre Dame in the New Year's game.

Meeting Notre Dame
It has been taken pretty much for granted, before the California victory over U. S. C., that the Trojans would play the Notre Dame game with their street clothes on and a sachel in either hand. Now that assumption will have to be rewritten.

Aubrey Devine, former All-American quarterback at Iowa, scouted Notre Dame for Southern California during the Irish battle with Georgia Tech. Mr. Devine unfolded his chest of opinion during the game that "Notre Dame has one of the greatest teams I ever have seen."

Devine's Opinion
Once during the battle with the Jackets, Jack Elder took the ball and broke through the line of scrimmage. Devine sat back and said: "I won't have to diagram that play. I have seen that boy on it before. He is gone." That's the same play he made 20 yards against Carnegie Tech with the longest run of the day for either team.

Devine was asked of Southern California's chances of beating Notre Dame. "Their reserve power will be hard for any outfit to down," he replied. "They look like the champions or near-champions to me."

It has begun to look that way to lots of other people, too.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
At one stage of the Chicago-Princeton game, Chicago had four backs who never had played high school football surpassing Princeton's array of players developed by prep schools. The four were Paul Stagg, Everett Van Nise, Harold Blum and Ben Watenberg. The chief reason why Art Fletcher didn't become manager of the Yankees, it is said, is that Mrs. Fletcher didn't want him to—because he almost lost his health managing these Phils. Members of the Ohio State team are given complimentary tickets for their families—and Sam Selby, the Buckeye's nifty guard, has eight sisters—Sam's work against Pitt alone earns for him All-American consideration—and we haven't met any of Sam's sisters, either—Stuart Holcomb, Ohio's fullback weighs 165 pounds.

"Mitey" Leader

Martin L. Davey, Jr., above, 74-pound husky, will play quarterback for the Kent Beareats in their battle for the 100-pound national championship with the Holy Name eleven of Columbus, O., to be staged as a preliminary to the Ohio State-Illinois game in Ohio Stadium Nov. 23. The Beareats will fly to Columbus in Goodyear blimps. Davey is the son of former Congressman Martin L. Davey of Kent.

At the right is Joe Savoldi, number 54, Notre Dame fullback, showing his heels to the Californians in a trek around right end.

INTENSE PAIN IN HEAD & BACK

Mississippi Lady Says She Took Cardui and Felt Stronger, Better.

Jackson, Miss.—"A few years ago, I found that I was very weak, and that nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," says Mrs. R. B. Douglas, of 704 Congress Street, this city.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times, I would have to hold on to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition."

"My mother told me that I should take some Cardui. After taking two bottles, I felt stronger, but I kept on taking Cardui until my head and back quit hurting. I took six bottles in all, and have never quit praising Cardui since then."

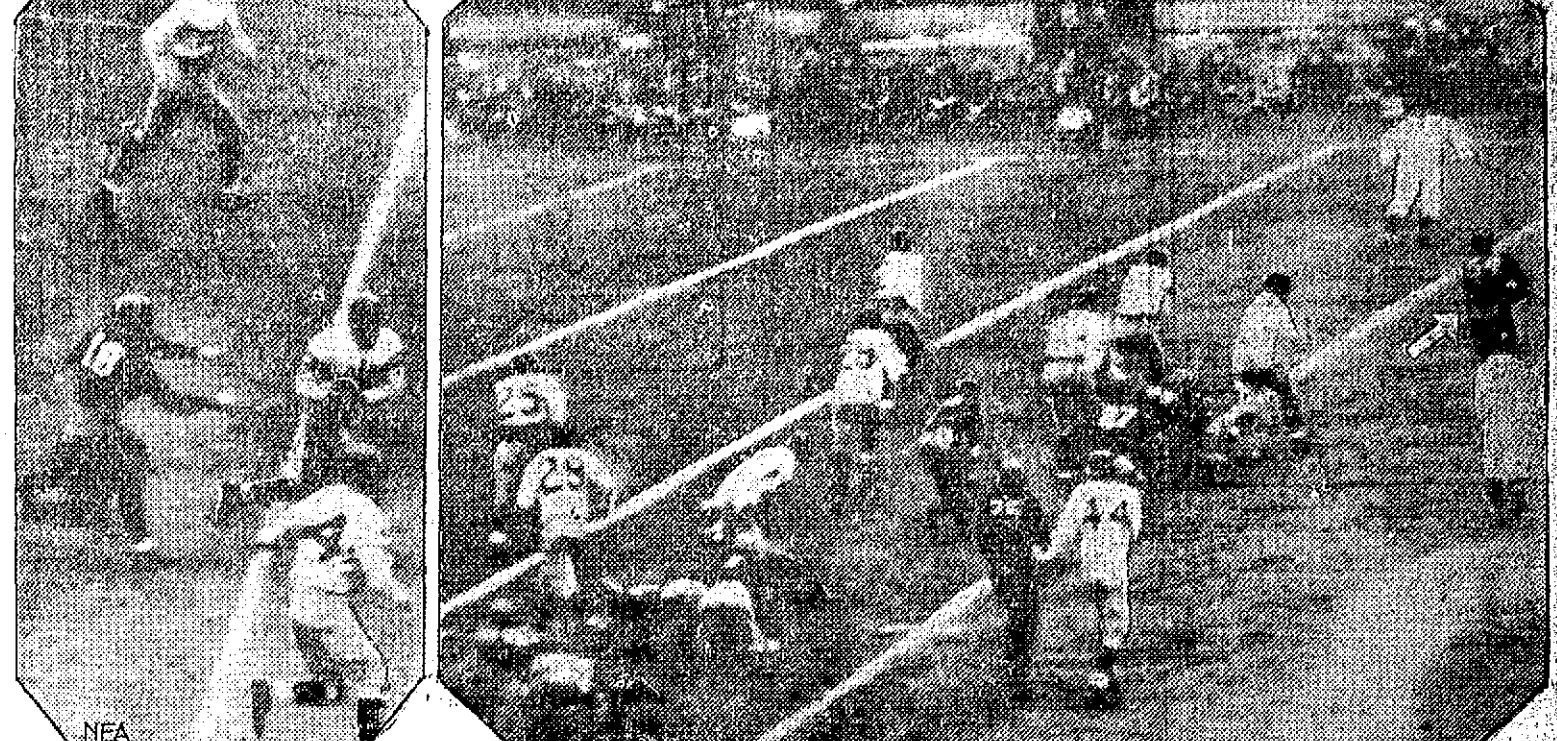

Thousands of other women, who had been in a run-down, suffering condition, have reported that after taking Cardui their health was better.

The medicinal value of the herbs from which Cardui is extracted has been well-known in the history of medicine for more than six hundred years. Get a bottle, today.

"Let's get up a Newspaper ad"

This is No. 3 of a series of ads depicting the various processes of advertising production. The dimension of the layout appeared in ad No. 2. No. 4 will appear in an early issue.

"we'll need a PICTURE"

Following the general idea of our layout, we must have a capable artist draw a sketch of our "Roseanne Dresses" as they actually appear on the wearer. For the best effect this sketch should be drawn from a living model. After we okeh this drawing we must have an etching made.

Through our exclusive franchise for the Meyer Both General Newspaper Service we are able to eliminate these drawings and engravings from the Hope Star advertiser's cost sheets by supplying a vast new selection of appropriate illustrations each month. We urge our advertisers to make unlimited use of this service at no additional cost.

Tulane Hopes to Collect With Banker Showing Way

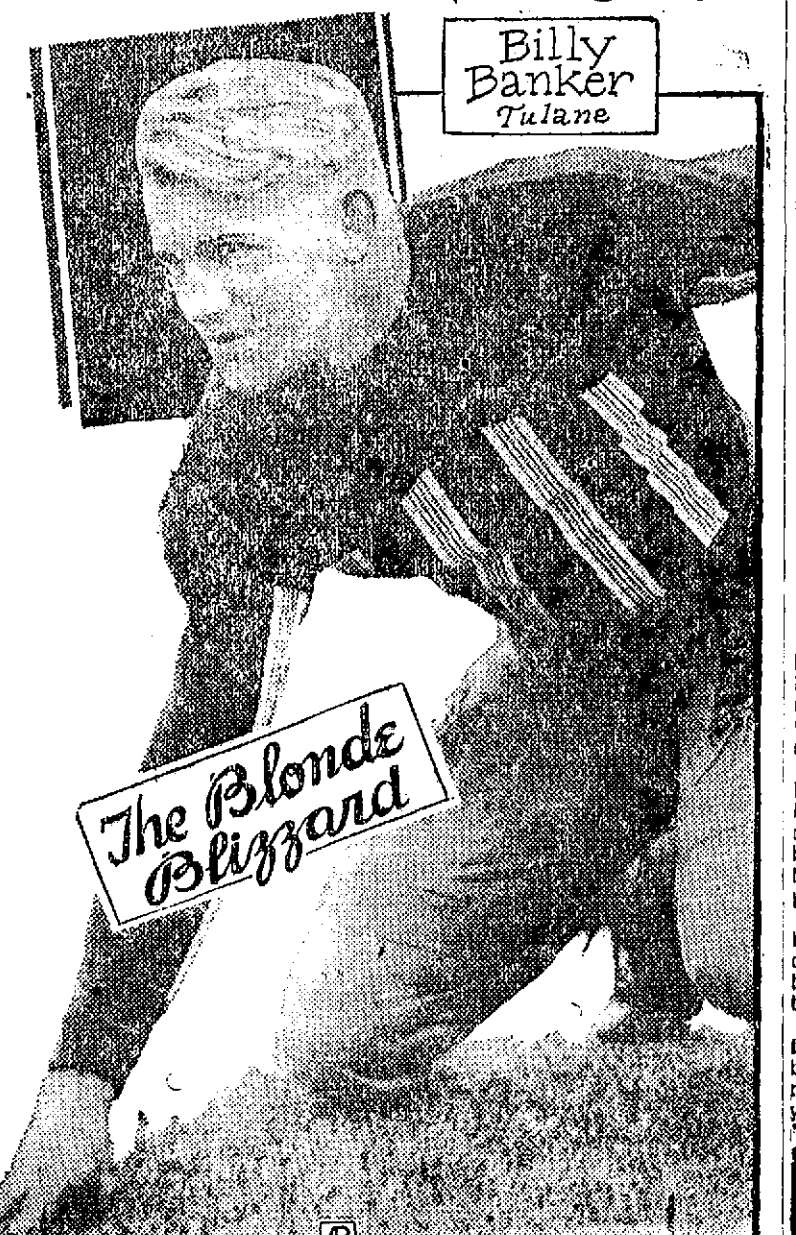

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Tulane's undefeated and untied Green Wave, which appears to be headed for at least partial ownership of the Southern conference football championship, has done three things no other Green team has been able to do.

Regarded a few years ago as just another setup for the stronger southern teams, Tulane was not recognized as one of the leading Dixie championship contenders until the Wave began establishing a few precedents in the way of victories. The Wave has rolled over Texas A. & M., Georgia Tech and Georgia, chalking up the initial Tulane victory over each of the three.

And when the Wave's fierce attack, led by the galloping Billy Banker, subdued the Texans and Georgians the Greens carved a niche for themselves as one of the best teams Dixie ever has turned out.

Without a plentiful supply of capable reserves, the Wave has pounced away with the eleven regulars taking and giving most of the punishment until the Green has taken on an ex-ample of that spirit is Charlie Rucker, tackle who broke his nose in the Georgia game but continued his aggressive tactics and blocked a punt a few moments after the play in which he was injured.

Despite the big hand given Billy Banker, the blonde blizzard and the Wave's leading ground gainer, and Little Ike Armstrong, his running mate has been largely responsible for the Tulane triumphs.

Billy Banker, the leading ground gainer of Tulane, is supported by a line of big boys who know how to bruise the opposition. The Green Wave banks on Banker to lead the way to the Southern conference football championship.

Heating Up Brain Speeds Thinking

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Interesting experiments in applying diathermic waves through the skull bones to the large brain or cerebrum are being carried out by Dr. Hans Hoff and Prof. Paul Schilder at the Psychiatric clinic of Vienna university.

It already had been discovered that the application of cold and heat to the small brain or cerebellum had the effect of reducing and increasing activity respectively.

Efforts now are being made to reach the large brain with these waves and success will permit the possibility of applying diathermy to bring about an extension of the intellectual faculties which have their seat in that organ.

to turn the inside knob of the door. He vanished that night by stepping into the closet, whose door he had left ajar. Not that he told me, but, of course, since I knew about the closet, I knew how he worked his disappearance.

She emerged from the closet, and quietly took her seat again beside Mrs. Hogarth's desk.

"It was soon after this informal visit, then, that Mrs. Rhodes evicted Sevier," Strawn asked.

"Yes. I was glad when he left. I never wanted to see him again, but I had to—every day, for the played the violin beside me at the theater. Mr. Hartmann, the manager, fired him last Friday, and Saturday night as I told you, he made one more attempt to get me to help him rob Mrs. Hogarth. I refused, and I was sure he wouldn't have the nerve to go through with it alone. He wasn't a regular crook, you know, but Mrs. Hogarth's money tempted him terribly. Well, I came home and as I passed through the hall by Mrs. Hogarth's door I saw that her light was still on. I'd noticed it as I came up—e don't walk, too. I was terribly worried."

"About Sevier? You intended to warn her?" Strawn asked sarcastically.

Cora flushed darkly. "No. I was worried sick over Bert's not having met me at the theater as he'd promised to do. All the way home I'd been almost crazy for fear Bert had called on Mrs. Hogarth, as he'd said he had a good notion to do, and that she'd told him that story about Emil—about his crawling out of my window at 2 o'clock in the morning. It would have been just like Mrs. Hogarth to think it her duty to warn Bert against me. She must have heard the gossip about Bert and me—Everyone teased us—" Her voice broke, but soon she mastered her emotion and went on:

"I suddenly decided that, since she was awake, I'd simply ask her if she had told on me. And if she hadn't, I was going to plead with her not to—for the sake of the affection she once had for me. . . . Well, I knocked. There wasn't any answer. I knocked again, very low, and when she didn't answer, I got terribly frightened. I thought maybe she had had one of her heart attacks and needed help, or that Emil had—"

Again her voice broke. "Though he never said one word to me about killing her if she caught him trying to rob her!" Cora protested passionately.

Hope's Trade Territory

A map which illustrates the importance of Hope as the commercial and geographical center of Southwest Arkansas, an area which is given credit for being the most prosperous agricultural section of the state.

50,000 People-10,000 Families In Hope Star's Trade Radius

A check-up of the patrons served by the postoffices, including rural mail carriers, reveals a total of more than 10,000 families, living either within the circle above, or else getting their mail through post offices within, or on the edge of the circle. The United States Department of Census estimates there are five people to every family. This would indicate a total population of 50,000, or 2 1-2 per cent of the population of the entire state of Arkansas. Manufacturers and wholesalers records show that more than 2 1-2 per cent of the total of business transacted is within this trade territory, which centers in Hope.

Hope merchants can eventually thoroughly cover this territory through the Hope Star and the Weekly Star, since every effort is being made to get these papers into the homes of this section. Below is an itemized list of post office patrons in the Hope trade territory.
